THE SHIRT.

J.H. HOUGHTON.

1

My dear little Manikin quick,
 Unfirable, still, and expert,
 Come join with your merry click,click,
 My new-Fangled Song of a Shirt.
 Then ho for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the needle and thimble,
 Let the Seamstress be gay as a queen,
 With assistant so able and nimble.

2

You're a sweet little WHEELER I know,
 And a chorus can hum to my song,
 And 'twere well could I find me a beau
 Could work without firing as long.
 Then ho for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the needle and thimble
 There's nothing in modern times seen
 Can equal its magic so nimble

3

Swift as fairy with wave of her wand,
 'Twill run up a body or skirt,
 Skim lightly o'er gusset and band,
 And presto 'twill turn off a Shirt.
 Then ho, for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the needle and thimble
 Long seams by the hand are, I ween,
 Out of date, as a hood or a wimple.

4

In old times the Sewing Girl's toil
 Killed myriads blooming and young,
 But now at the work she may smile,
 Since you to the rescue have sprung.
 Then ho for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the thimble and needle,
 Crooked spines will no longer be seen,
 While the foot saves the back with the treadle.

5

To working girl kindest of friends,
 Your obsequious and truly gallant,
 Sure the he folks gave you as amends
 For these virtues of which they're so scant.
 Then ho for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the needle and thimble
 Its work is so even and clean,
 And suiting to gentle and simple.

6

Like a doughty knight-errant, you wield
 Your slim lance to aid damsel's distress,
 And gorgeously armor'd and steel'd,
 You shine out, the gallant confessed.
 Then ho for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the thimble and needle,
 Could all machine ladies convene,
 Its inventor they'd praise and they'd wheedle.

7

But gents let me give you advice,
 Do you want sewing not to be beaten,
 First in fashion and moderate in price,
 Make your mind up and call upon LEIGHTON
 Then ho! for the SEWING MACHINE,
 Away with the needle and thimble
 Let art crown advancement as queen
 With this useful invention her symbol.
